MARK ISAACS
Bachelor of Arts (Communications), Bachelor of Arts (International Studies)

Mark was born in Oxford, England in 1988 and his family immigrated to Australia by plane just one year later. His English father taught him to play cricket and football in the northern suburbs of Sydney; his Australian mother taught him manners, morals, and how to fold bed-sheets properly.

Mark’s farcical comedy, The Dark of the Matinee, was performed at the 2006 Short and Sweet ten-minute play festival. He graduated with a BA in Communications and a BA in International Studies from UTS.

Mark became impassioned by the asylum seeker debate after a visit to Villawood Detention Centre while writing social justice articles for Oxfam’s 3 Things youth movement. Months later, in October 2012, Mark was employed by the Salvation Army to work at the Nauru Regional Processing Centre. While in Nauru, Mark established the Recreations program and Oceans program for asylum seekers. He eventually resigned from the Salvation Army in June 2013 and spoke out publicly against the government’s No Advantage policy.

Continuing his passion for humanitarian work, Mark is now employed as a case manager at an asylum seeker settlement agency in Sydney.
